

LAND LOSS, WEALTH, AND REPARATIONS

Wednesday, October 16 · 6-8PM · Austin North Harvard Law School, Cambridge · Food Served

BLACK FARMERS OWNED OVER 16 MILLION ACRES OF LAND IN 1910, YET BY THE END OF THE 20TH CENTURY, ALMOST ALL OF IT WAS GONE.

WHY?

The panelists will discuss their research estimating that black farmers have lost hundreds of billions of dollars' worth of land and income as a result of discrimination, the impact this loss has had on racial wealth inequality, and efforts to address these disparities through legal reform, certain policy initiatives, and reparations.

PANELISTS:

- Dania Francis; Assistant Professor, University of Massachusetts Amherst
- Darrick Hamilton; Executive Director, Kirwan Institute for the Study of Race and Ethnicity, The Ohio State University
- Thomas Mitchell; Professor of Law, Co-Director of the Program in Real Estate and Community Development Law, Texas A&M University School of Law
- Bryce Wilson Stucki; independent researcher and journalist

FOOD LAW and POLICY CLINIC
HARVARD LAW SCHOOL

MISSISSIPPI DELTA PROJECT
AT HARVARD LAW SCHOOL